SuperFood

Black carrots

Black carrots are rich in anthocyanins, which have a powerful antioxidant action including lutein, a carotenoid which helps eyesight and vascular health. Moreover, these vegetables are naturally high in calcium easily absorbed, beta carotene and vitamin E.

Ginger

Originally from Far East the ginger rhizome and its bitter note are known to facilitate digestion.

Turmeric

Not only exotic flavors and scents in this Asian native spice but also flavonoids with great nutritional properties, such as curcumin long known for its anti-inflammatory and antioxidant properties.

Blueberry

Scented and irresistible purple pearls rich in anthocyanins and anthocyanosides, active against free radicals and cellular aging. These fruits are also known for the anti-inflammatory properties of proanthocyanidins.

Apple

Basic, easy to find and to eat, the apple regulates intestinal functions thanks to its high fiber content, while tannins and flavonoids contained in it act as antioxidants, astringents and anti-inflammatories.
